Dear Mr. Marcus,

I am writing regarding the ongoing stalemate over the broadcasting of Dodgers games in the Los Angeles region. They are a Los Angeles treasure, and this is the third season where 60 percent of the region will be unable to watch their games on television. I am asking you to not throw in the towel and come back to the negotiation table.

My family has a long history with the Dodgers, beginning with my father, County Supervisor Kenny Hahn, who brought the team to Los Angeles. It is disheartening to see that almost 60 years later, their fans are unable to watch their games. Lack of access this season is especially heartbreaking because, as you know, it is the final season of legendary Hall of Fame broadcaster, Vin Scully.

I am aware that a few weeks ago your company offered to reduce the price of SportsNet LA. However it is clear that this gesture is not enough and I ask that you take this matter seriously and either go back to the negotiating table, take up the Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) offer to engage in mediation, or simply provide fans access to games for free much like you did at the end of the 2014 season.

This disagreement has gone on for far too long and is unfair to Dodger fans.

Sincerely,

Janice Hahn
